California fabricator SMI pivots to deliver COVID-19 face shields

Seal Methods Inc. is offering protective face shields to help protect healthcare workers.

Santa Fe Springs, Calif. - April 9, 2020 – Established in 1974, California-based Seal Methods Inc. (SMI) is the world's most comprehensive specialty components fabricator, and a leader in die cut solutions. As COVID-19 continued to spread, the shortage of personal protective equipment (PPE) for healthcare workers became immediately evident. The team at SMI quickly prototyped a face shield that could be efficiently mass produced to meet the growing need.

The SMI protective face shields serve as emergency disposable protection, suitable for workers in healthcare, warehouses, and other retail or frontline environments. They are made with a soft, breathable foam pad for comfort, are easy to take on and off with the elastic headband, and allow for use with a face mask, glasses or safety goggles. These face shields help protect against the transmission of respiratory droplets, blood pathogens or body fluids, in order to help slow the spread of COVID-19.

"We saw the immediate need by healthcare workers for better protective equipment," said Darin Welter, VP of Sales at SMI. "Medical components are one of the products we manufacture, so we knew we could quickly start producing face shields and get them in the hands of those who need them most."

The team at SMI is proud to be contributing to the fight against the COVID-19 pandemic by producing PPE for essential workers. Cases of 100 individually bagged SMI protective face shields are already being delivered, and SMI is ready to meet ongoing demand.
