SMI & 3M: A Partnership that Sticks Together

MEDICAL ADHESIVES AND BODY-WORN COMPONENTS

With 85 years in combined experience in medical adhesives & components, SMI and 3M form the perfect partnership to deliver premium quality medical products. Together we deliver a range of body-worn medical devices, customized, packaged, and delivered precisely to your needs.

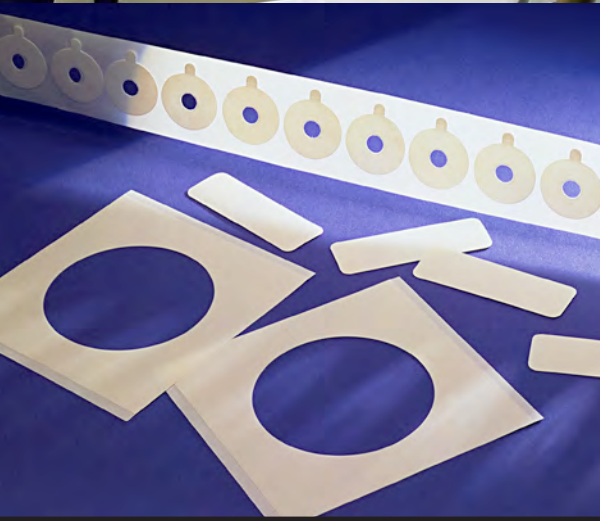

When it comes to skin, no one understands the unique challenges of this delicate surface better. As a living organ, it is constantly changing, breathing and absorbing and expelling moisture. These qualities make skin difficult to attach to, and difficult to mimic for product performance testing. This is why choosing a partner with experience and a history of reliability is so crucial. Understanding which materials to pair with each product, based on its intended use, is essential throughout the product development stages. We have a wide range of materials to suit all your body worn medical device requirements, and a team of experts to help create customized solutions that improve device reliability, enhance performance and reduce costs.
